

2014 AUSTRALIAN CLIMATE ACTION SUMMIT

COMEDY VIDEO COMPETITION

The annual Australian Climate Action Summit will be held in Brisbane from September 19th – 21st, 2014. The Summit is a grassroots event driven by concerns for the future.

Climate change and how to live with it is the greatest problem we face today. If you doubt it's a problem look whose side you are on: Rupert Murdoch, Tony Abbott, George Brandis, Andrew Bolt, Campbell Newman, Alan Jones, Janet Albrechtsen and dozens of other hacks and mining industry arse-lickers doubt it's a problem too, and that's a problem.

Last year, over 500 people including scientists, engineers, health and other professionals, politicians, representatives from approximately 100 climate groups with hundreds of thousands of members across Australia, and other concerned members of the public, attended the Community Climate Network's 5th Australian Climate Action Summit in Sydney.

Young and old they come at their own expense to tackle really tricky issues and they need a laugh.

Your task, should you accept it is to make a video about some aspect of climate change and/or sustainability and make it funny. This year's Summit theme is Opportunities and Solutions: How we in the community can bypass government and corporate obstacles, to get to effective climate action.

Your video can be about the science of sea water, the future of sausages, the Politics of denial or Gina and Clive or whatever. It's up to you. It can be live action or animation. And it can be a maximum of 60 seconds excluding closing credits. (Closing credits are your opportunity to tell viewers who you are what you do and how they can contact you.)

All entries will be played at the conference and added to a Australian Climate Action Summit Youtube channel.

Send your entries as a file or a Youtube link and any questions to rod.quantock@gmail.com. Entries close Thursday 18th of September.

The winner gets a weekend at The Diana Plaza Hotel, South Brisbane and national and international exposure.
